

Hidden In Plain Sight

Chrysopoeia For Fallen Angels - I have been asked if some of the text was garbled. In the Free Ebook there are two pages with different fonts, this is not a mistake. I thought I should leave behind an explanation of this little intended joke to be stored in the digital archives.

The page titled Liber Bacchus has vertical capital letters that spell THOTH and have random italicised letters which are an anagram spelling Madness.

The other page, The Joker Always Wins, has vertical letters spelling HERMES and Capital letters within words that vertically spell Genius.

This of course is in reference to the quote by Aristotle - "No great genius has ever existed without some touch of madness."

Liber Bacchus

This book iS a fabrication
Hyperbole of a sick iMagination
Only the rāmblings of a Fool
Therefore everything iS a lie
Hence the only truth is found within

Gnothi Seauton

The Joker Always Wins

HyGieia
EmpEdocles
RoseNkreuz
MonoImus
Euclid
SeShat

The Trickster

There are also references to the time using the colon format, ie. 3:20 pm as opposed to the numbers being spelled out. There is a hint that the Time is referring to the seven seals and the process of opening the chakras.

(Keep an eye out for other vertical spellings and esoteric innuendoes - I don't think I need to reveal those here).
